Greg also likes celebrating Hitler for anti-Semitism. Bankers, in racist circles, is code for Jews.

109 countries is a popular anti-Semitic trope about Jews being kicked out of 109 countries. Greg wants them kicked out of America.

Hey, moron. Guess who brought them to the country in the first place? Your white ancestors you seem to be so proud of.

Maybe if actually made something of your life, you wouldn't leech off all your ancestors' accomplishments as if your dumb ass did them yourself.

Actually..... a certain group of small hats brought them to my nation. A very subversive group at that.

Greg also likes to make lynching jokes. For those that weren't aware, Mississippi had the most lynchings in the United States. Greg, his family, and most of the state are aware of this.

It all comes down to Greg believing he's the Master Race. He believes Jews, African-Americans, and immigrants are all lesser or even non-people.

The screenshot shows a Twitter thread. The top tweet is from @schmoodcriminal, dated May 6, asking "What's your score?" and linking to a thread. The thread contains a meme titled "Aryan Exam" with a score of 17/20. The meme lists various traits and their scores:

Eye Color	Skin Color	Hair Color
Blue - 5	Lightest - 6	Blonde - 5
Light Blue - 4	Light - 5	Light Blonde - 4
Dark Blue - 3	Medium - 4	Dark Blonde - 3
Dark Blue - 2	Dark - 3	Dark Blonde - 2

Below the table, there is a section for Height with four silhouettes and their corresponding scores:

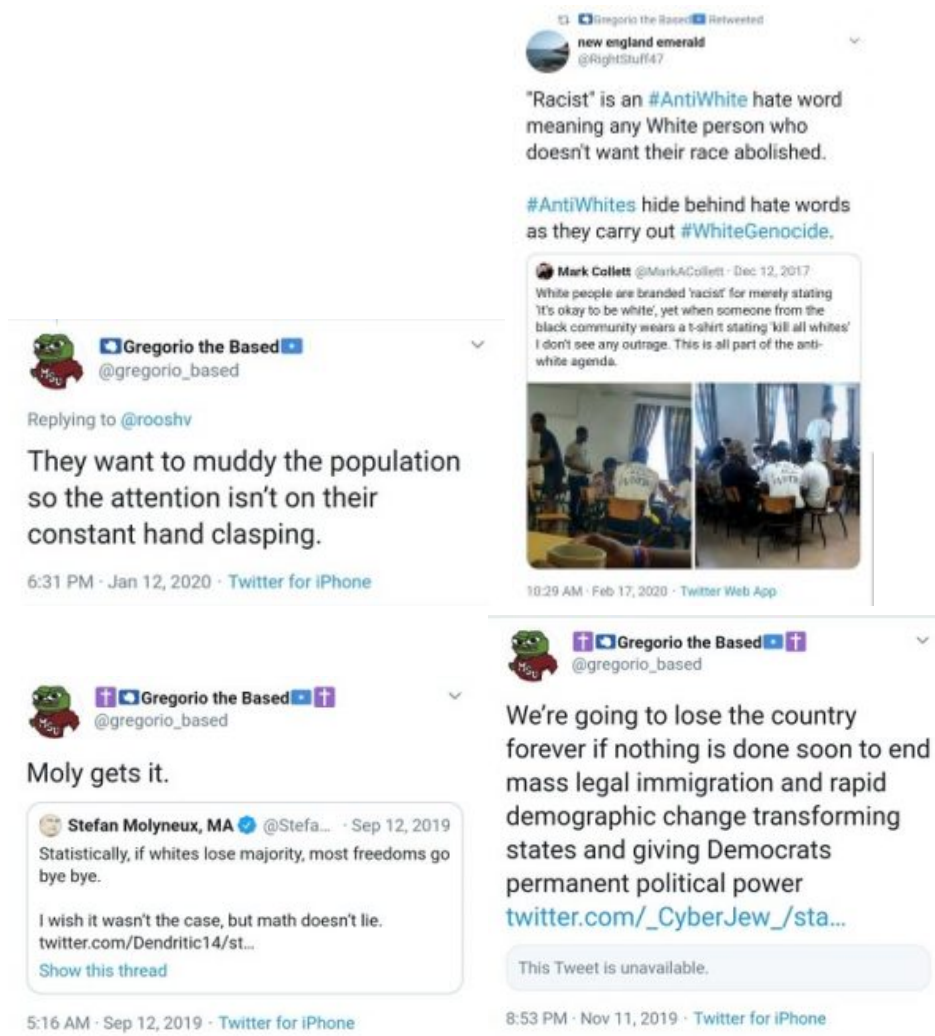

Height	Score
5'5" - 5'8"	1
5'9" - 6'0"	2
6'1" - 6'5"	3
6'5" +	4

The final score is 17/20.

The bottom tweet is from Gregorio the Based (@gregorio_based), replying to @schmoodcriminal, dated May 6, 2020, at 4:31 PM. The reply says "17 master race."

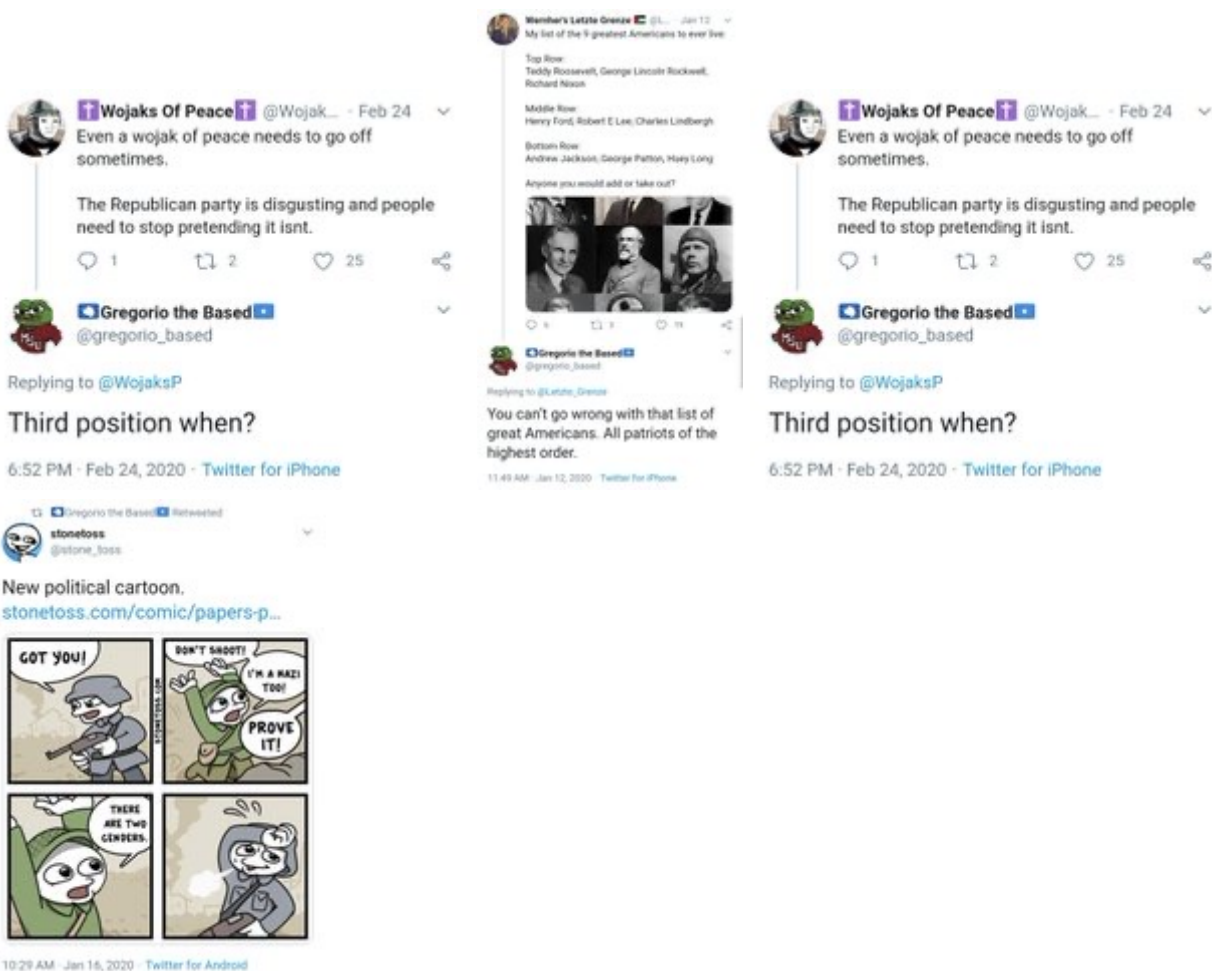

Why are these lessers and non-people a problem for Greg as a shining example of Ultimately, Greg wants boogaloo. Boogaloo is slang for a civil war, but it's almost always used as another word for Rahuwa in the south, which means racial holy war.

Famous bluesman Big George Brock worked on the Flowers Plantation in his youth and describes it in some detail.

In the 2006 documentary film Hard Times, Mississippi-born bluesman Big George Brock recalled working the cotton fields as a young man and tied that experience to the blues:

The blues come from hard times. Blues came from a feeling that you got when you didn't have nowhere else to go, and the blues walked into your soul and into your mind, and it just accumulate like grass grow out of the ground. It just grew up in you. That's the way it grew up in me. I learned how to sing the blues out in the cotton field. Out in them lonesome cotton fields and stuff, I learned how to sing the blues.

Out there, you just think about what you have, and you make your own self happy. I had a mule that if you didn't sing the blues, she didn't want to work right. And if you sing the blues, that mule, she'd work all day. You walking the cotton field, you walking the fields all day long. You just don't know how many miles you go in the run of a day. Them's a long mile.

They used to plant cotton with a mule. Now, they plant it with a tractor. Plant it, work it, grow it, pick it. They do everything now with tractors. But back in them days, they did it with these. You did it with your hands. We used to pick a bale of cotton a day, right here [on Flower's Plantation, just outside Clarksdale]. You had two rows, and this is the way you did this cotton. [Brock shows how to pick two rows, side to side, as he walks through the field.] You grab this cotton like this, pick it, one row to the other, and put it in your sack. You go all the way up there, till you get all the way, and your sack get full. When your sack get full, then you have to go over there to the trailer and weigh that cotton, [put it in the trailer] and then come back and start right back where you left off at. Then, all day long, you pick cotton. And then when you get the amount of cotton that you want [i.e., the trailer is full], the amount of work you want, you took it to the gin—'cause the trailer would be sitting out there on the road.

To summarize, Greg is extraordinarily racist and desires civil war in America. Those that he hates: Jews, African-Americans, homosexuals, immigrants, and others. “They” are his enemy.

Shortly after this information was published via thread on Twitter, Greg’s entire family blocked the author and most locked their accounts, or changed their usernames.
